All holidays involve some element of risk, whether in the form of illness, bad weather, being unable to get what we want if we delay booking, or (7) _____. We ask ourselves what risks we would run if we went there, if there is a high likelihood of their occurrence, if the risks are avoidable and how significant the consequences would be.

Some tourists, of course, relish a degree of risk, as this gives an edge of excitement to the holiday. (8) _____ Others, however, are risk averse and will studiously avoid risk wherever possible. Clearly, the significance of the risk will be a key factor. (9) _____ The risk averse will book early, choose to return to the same resort and hotel they have visited, knowing its reliability, or book a package tour rather than travel independently.

(10) _____ There is evidence that much of the continuing reluctance shown by some tourists to seek information and make bookings through Internet providers can be attributed to, in part, the lack of face-to-face contact with a trusted – and, hopefully, expert – travel agent and, in part, (11) _____ in favour of the information provided.

Read the passage and mark the letter A, B, C or D on your answer sheet to indicate the best answer to each of the following questions from 18 to 25.

The concept of project farming, where farmers come together to collaborate on large-scale agricultural projects, has gained significant traction, and modern technology keeps this collaboration on track. Advanced technologies such as GPS, sensors, drones, and data analytics are used to optimise agricultural practices. Additionally, the collected real-time data on soil conditions, weather patterns, and plant growth enables farmers to accelerate the decision-making process that maximises productivity while minimising resource wastage.

GPS technology allows farmers to precisely map out their fields and create customised planting plans. This ensures that seeds are sown at optimal locations based on soil characteristics and previous yield data. By avoiding areas with poor fertility, farmers can increase their overall crop yield. Camera traps provide advance warnings of insects, so farmers do not have to treat the whole field. This, therefore, helps curb chemical runoff and save money for every party involved in the project.

Technology also plays a vital role in optimising irrigation practices for sustainable agriculture. Specialised equipment reports dryness hour by hour, and weather apps forecast rain for the week ahead. Automated valves give each zone exactly the water it needs and pause when clouds are approaching. This cuts pumping costs and protects groundwater while keeping the crop healthy. On dry continents, such savings keep projects economically viable.

The digital trail does not stop at the farm gate. Cloud platforms let project farmers, processors, and truck drivers input harvest weights, storage temperatures, and delivery times from the moment they change, while blockchain records freeze each entry so customers can trust it. Analytics tools combine seasons of records to forecast demand, spot price opportunities, and mark weak points in the workflow. This allows project farmers to anticipate market demand, exploit resource allocation, and plan for potential challenges.

Question 18. Which of the following is NOT mentioned in paragraph 1 as a type of collected real-time data?

A. soil conditions

B. weather patterns

C. data analytics

D. plant growth

Question 19. The word accelerate in paragraph 1 can be best replaced by _____.

A. speed

B. Install

C. require

D. curb

Question 20. The word curb in paragraph 2 is OPPOSITE in meaning to _____.

A. reduce

B. Monitor

C. limit

D. increase

Question 21. The word it in paragraph 3 refers to _____.

A. zone

B. equipment

C. dryness

D. water

Question 22. Which of the following best paraphrases the underlined sentence in paragraph 3?

A. Projects in dry regions are feasible because of the huge budget gained from applying smart irrigation.

B. In places with hot weather, economic projects are possible with money saved from smart irrigation.

C. Continents with dry climate are the most likely enjoy financial benefits from smart irrigation projects.

D. Money saved thanks to smart irrigation maintains the economic practicality of projects in dry areas.

Question 23. Which of the following is TRUE according to paragraph 4?

A. With the help of analytic tools, project farmers can anticipate market demand.

B. Cloud platforms allow processors to predict demand for the following seasons.

C. The digital trail would stop after the project partners have gathered their harvest.

D. Customers tend to find the entries frozen by blockchain records untrustworthy..

Question 24. Which paragraph mentions a real-time tracking the produce?

A. Paragraph 2

B. Paragraph 1

C. Paragraph 4

D. Paragraph 3

Question 25. Which paragraph mentions a preventive measure against biological threats?

A. Paragraph 1

B. Paragraph 4

C. Paragraph 3

D. Paragraph 2

Read the passage and mark the letter A, B, C or D on your answer sheet to indicate the best answer to each of the following questions from 26 to 35.

We are living through a boom in greenwashing – the strategic use of comforting environmental claims to disguise business-as-usual pollution. Picture a chief executive whose company emits millions of tonnes of CO_2. Genuine decarbonisation would require bruising boardroom discussions, huge capital outlays, and a complete redesign of the firm's model. Far easier is to hire a creative agency to plaster products with labels such as "carbon-neutral" or "net-zero", calming critics, investors, and even eco-conscious children while emissions continue unvexed.

This tactic meets consumers at every turn. Airline websites promise guilt-free flights, petrol pumps boast zero-impact fuel, and even supermarket bacon is marketed as net-zero. [I] Advertising trickery is ancient, yet today's greenwashing – the practice of deliberately covering ongoing pollution in eco-friendly language – has flourished only recently. The expression surfaced in the 1980s amid oil spills and growing climate science, but the real explosion has come as public anxiety over global heating and biodiversity loss has intensified. Faced with mounting scrutiny, many brands prefer glossy PR to structural reform. Such corporate sleight of hand has become so pervasive that regulators in Europe and the United States are scrambling to tighten rules on environmental claims, yet enforcement still lags behind marketing creativity. [II] The fossil-fuel sector exemplifies the issue. After decades covertly sowing doubt about climate science, oil and gas giants have grasped that direct denial is reputationally toxic. They have therefore swapped their denial tactics for a "green" paint-sprayer, trumpeting token investments in renewables while expanding drilling.

Why does this matter? Greenwashing and climate denial share a core objective: to postpone the emission cuts urgently required to avert climate breakdown. [III] Whereas denial invites opposition, greenwashing lulls the public into believing problems are already solved. Under this collective illusion, pressure on high-emitting firms evaporates and the radical decisions needed to transform energy, transport, and food systems are delayed indefinitely. [IV] Greenwashing thus acts as a soothing lullaby, leading society toward ecological ruin with a tune of comforting half-truths. Exposing this deception is essential if clichés are to be replaced by real, measurable emission cuts.

Question 26. According to paragraph 1, genuine decarbonisation _____.

A. is costly and demanding

B. is overlooked by corporations

C. physically injures those involved

D. involves hiring an expert agency

Question 27. Which of the following best summarises paragraph 1?

A. Large-emission enterprises prefer "net-zero" or "carbon-neutral" tags on their offerings over genuine decarbonisation.

B. The exponential growth of greenwashing is attributable to the environmental benefits the strategy brings to major emitters.

C. Chief executives' opinions are divided on whether or not genuine decarbonisation should be consistently implemented.

D. The great pressure to soothe environmental claims urges high-emitting corporations to adopt greenwashing widely.

Question 28. Which of the following is NOT stated as an example of greenwashed products or services?

A. net-zero bacon

B. non-degradable electronics

C. guilt-free flights

D. zero-impact fuel

Question 29. The word glossy in paragraph 2 most nearly means _____.

A. confusing but engaging

B. costly but ineffective

C. expensive but essential

D. appealing but superficial

Question 30. The word They in paragraph 2 refers to _____.

A. rules on environmental claims

B. regulators in Europe

C. the United States

D. oil and gas giants

Question 31. Which of the following best paraphrases the underlined sentence in paragraph 3?

A. Not until genuine efforts to cut down on emissions are recognised could the truth about greenwashing be concealed.

B. No sooner had empty resolutions minimised emissions than the plain truth about greenwashing was elucidated.

C. Genuine efforts to reduce emissions cannot take the place of rhetoric without greenwashing being uncovered.

D. Were it not for genuine efforts to reduce emissions, rhetoric about greenwashing should not be brought to light.

Question 32. According to the passage, the adoption of "green" paint by fossil-fuel companies is mentioned as _____.

A. a prompt response to public demand for eco-friendly products

B. a particular way to dispute the claims about environmental crisis

C. a typical application of climate science

D. a specific example of greenwashing

Question 33. Which of the following can be inferred from the passage?

A. The profits that high-emitting firms reap from running a "green" marketing campaign provide them with resources to reinvest in renewable ventures.

B. The perceived action created by greenwashing has stressed the urgency for meaningful regulatory and corporate changes to address climate changes.

C. Regulators have the necessary tools and resources to verify most environmental claims, which enables them to prevent misleading messages from reaching everyday consumers.

D. Increased public concern about environmental issues, coupled with their complacency with "eco-friendly" labelled products, contributes to the rise of greenwashing.

Question 34. Where in the passage does the following sentence best fit?

Yet greenwashing is arguably more insidious.

A. [III]

B. [I]

C. [IV]

D. [II]

Question 35. Which of the following best summarises the passage?

A. A new wave of greenwashing allows corporations to hide ongoing pollution behind reassuring eco-labels, diverting scrutiny from the rapid emission cuts considered vital by scientists.

B. Greenwashing has significantly grown in its scale and sophistication since its emergence, attracting considerable attention of both the general public and policymakers worldwide.

C. Greenwashing has now been pervading everyday products and services, raising customers' awareness of the urgent need to maintain sustainable developments.

D. Major emitters have opted for open climate denials in preference to more sophisticated greenwashing to preserve profits and reputation instead of reforming their core operations.

Mark the letter A, B, C or D on your answer sheet to indicate the best arrangement of utterances or sentences to make a cohesive and coherent exchange or text in each of the following questions from 36 to 40.

Question 36.

a. Marvell has now become a more dynamic and prosperous city, offering greater opportunities for both residents and investors.
